Harvest 2017

Harvest 2017 will be certainly remembered for being one of the lowest yields in memory of man.

The factors that led to this low production were basically two: the first was a strong frost at the end of April, which hit many vineyards compromising the production and the second factor was the low rainfall that characterized the entire summer season up to the harvest period.

Although this has created many problems and difficulties during the vinification phase, we have nevertheless managed to obtain an elegant, balanced wine with a good structure.
